

HON 3000/02 Community Engagement – Dr. Mary DeChesnay

Course Description: This 1-credit pass/fail course focuses on what it means to be engaged in one's community and how this activity shapes a person's growth and development. Students will explore literature, media, and their own life experiences to discuss roles and levels of involvement that capture the talents and interests of the individual. For example, many students participate in service-learning projects through their departments, or might conduct community-based participatory action research, a design that involves community members in designing, conducting and interpreting the research.
